Dear Dr. van Tiggelen

My own estimate of neonaticides in the United States was simply based on the fact that such events occur undiscovered because the neonates are put in the trash and never identified. There is no way to know what the exact number is. I am sending you a reference which shows the arrest rates for filicide in the United States. A correction was made showing that the original material was off by 10 fold, so that there were an average of nearly 500 arrests annually rather than 5000 which were identified in the first article due to a statistical error.

The reference is :

Fox, J.A., Swatt, M.L.: Uniform Crime Reports (United States): Supplemental homicide reports with multiple imputation, cumulative files 1976-2007 (Computer file). Ann Arbor, MI: Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research; 2008.

Best regards,
